FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS ABOUT A DRUG AND ALCOHOL TESTING PROGRAM

How long will it take to process my membership application?

It generally takes Western Aeromedical Consortium 1-2 business days to process your application and provide you with proof of membership. Within 1-2 weeks your company's program manual, training materials/videos and testing supplies will be shipped to your office. The program manual provided with your membership contains step-by-step instructions on how to initiate and manage your company's drug and alcohol program. Testing supplies can be sent by overnight courier if required for an additional charge.

Do I need to give my employees notice before testing them?

If your company is required to perform drug and alcohol testing on your safety-sensitive employees pursuant to Department of Transportation (DOT) rules and regulations, then no notice period is required. However, your company is required to post the required information/documents and provide your employees with appropriate handouts concerning the federal regulations and your company's drug and alcohol program. The program manual provided with membership contains all the necessary posters, documents, handouts and training materials required by federal regulations to be posted and given to your safety-sensitive employees.

How often are random tests selected?

Western Aeromedical Consortium selects random tests quarterly (i.e. four times per year) and ensures that the selection percentages are performed according to the required federal regulations. By choosing quarterly, this eliminates the chance of an employee being eligible for random selections twelve times a year (i.e. once a month). Western Aeromedical Consortium has found that quarterly, instead of monthly, random selections are more convenient for its members.

How are my employees notified they need to random test?

When Western Aeromedical Consortium chooses its random quarterly selections, a member's Designated Employer Representative, DER (i.e. individual selected by each company to manage its program) is provided with documentation listing the selected employees (or non-selection, if a company is not chosen to perform random testing). If a company is required to perform employee random testing for that particular quarter, the company's DER chooses the time for testing within the quarter. Instead of Western Aeromedical Consortium notifying a member that an employee should immediately be sent to the clinic for testing, your company's DER is allowed to schedule that testing when it is convenient for your company. Although the employee cannot be notified ahead of time of the required testing, your DER can schedule the test when the employee's brief absence from work for testing would cause the least amount of disruption. That way, your company is in control of its testing program, instead of the testing program being in control of your company.

What if I have a question regarding the drug and alcohol program?

We encourage you to call Western Aeromedical Consortium as often as you need. Although the program manual and accompanying materials are very easy to follow, occasionally situations or questions may arise. Western Aeromedical Consortium is owned and managed by a Certified Substance Abuse Program Administrator (C-SAPA) with 25+ years experience in the drug and alcohol testing field. Its staff is knowledgeable in the federal regulations and are here to help you manage your company's drug and alcohol program in the most effortless and efficient way possible.

Can I put my non-federally regulated safety-sensitive employees in my program?

They can be in a drug testing program but not the same random testing pool as your regulated employees, and they must be tested using different testing supplies. Contact Western Aeromedical Consortium for information on its non-federally regulated, company policy testing programs.
